CABINET MAKING.

Clarkson's Sudden Departure For Washington Excites Interest.

It is Predicted That Allison Will Have the Treasury Portfolio.

California's Cabinet Prospects Are Not Very Brilliant.

Estee Considered the Most Prominent Candidate From the Coast.

Cabinet Gossip.

INDIANAPOLIS, January 22.—General Harrison had the usual large number of callers to day. The sudden departure of J. S. Clarkson of Iowa for Washington, yesterday, is looked on with some interest here. A gentleman well informed politically said to night that it had been settled for several weeks that either Senator Allison or Clarkson was to go into the cabinet. Allison was offered the secretary portfolio several weeks ago, but protested that he preferred to remain in the senate. An understanding was finally had that if the president-elect could see any way clear to permit Allison to remain in the senate, he would invite Clarkson to a seat in the cabinet. The gentleman now believes that matters have reached a point where a decision must be reached and that Clarkson's trip east is the result, as he is vitally interested either way. The gentleman closed by predicting that within a short time it would appear that Allison was preparing to take the treasury portfolio. Very little has been heard here about California cabinet possibilities, and not a single prominent republican has visited General Harrison since election. It is believed however that Californian's have been earnestly at work. They have two favorite candidates, Judge M. M. Estee and Hon John L. Swift, with Estee far in the lead as regards endorsement.

Not yet Settled.

BERLIN, January 22.—There is no truth in the report that Germany came to an agreement with the United States in regard to difficulty in Samoa.

[illegible]

DENVER, January 22.—In the senate to day the "liberation of bills in committee of the whole" occupied the greater part of the time. Senator Betts introduced a bill to increase the number of judges by one in the Third judicial district and a bill to provide for the [illegible] of defendant corporations. Senate bill No 32, a bill for an act to amend an act entitled "An act to create and establish criminal courts in the counties of Arapahoe, Lake and Pueblo," was taken up. The judiciary committee had recommended certain amendments. Each article of the bill was carefully gone over. One portion of the bill provides for the abolishment of the public [illegible] court. Senator Barela objected to this. He thought it impossible for the district judge to endeavor to clear what [illegible] he had to do now. The committee was behind in all cases on the calendar. He favored another district judge. On Senator Barela's motion the bill was referred to the printing committee. Adjourned.

HOUSE.

After prayer and reading of the journal of yesterday's order was called. A message from the senate announced the passage by that body of senate concurrent resolution No 13, regarding the payment of incidental expenses out of the legislative contingent fund.

Bills introduced: By Swift—House bill 137, an act to establish the county of Bent from the territory of Bent. Referred to the committee on counties.

By Swift—H B. No 138, to amend an act creating the office of chaplain of the penitentiary. Referred to the committee on penitentiary.

The Parnell [illegible]

LONDON, January 22.—In the Parnell commission to day, Farnguer testified that O'Connor, member of parliament for Donegal, held an important position in the league. Davitt, Sexton and Dillon were members of the executive board. Nally used to visit the league rooms. Sir Charles Russell protested against the introduction of this evidence. He said Nally was undergoing trial and that he objected to any inquiry being made into the circumstances of Nally's crime in order to damage the members of the commission, who, it was alleged, associated with him. Members of the court decided the evidence admissible. Sir Charles Russell, in reply to a question by Justice Hannan, said the question under discussion was not "crucial." He was another Nally whom Parnell had thanked for his services to the league. Sir Henry James, counsel for the Times, produced a report of the speech made by Parnell at the league convention at Castle Barin, in which Parnell strongly commended Nally for his services to the league when it was first forming.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, January 22.—Senator Vest presented a petition as alleged immoral from the dentists asking a bounty of a dollar each for teeth extracted—"in order to encourage an honest, industry at a lower cost to patients and to encourage the immigration of dentists from other parts of the world thereby making a better market for agricultural and other products in this country."

The senate resumed consideration of the tariff bill the pending question being on the amendment, offered by Reagan, to the wool section.

Morrill read some remarks to the general effect that the republican party was always ready to reduce the tariff where it could safely be done. He continued by saying that England by free trade has sacrificed her landed estates to the supremacy abroad. That the Mills bill was a distinct abandonment of protection particularly as regards agriculture. It was tariff reduction on sugar that would reduce the cost to the consumer not less than one cent per pound and the proposed bounty on sugar would multiply the crops of farmers by the introduction of permanently profitable crops. Reagan made an agreement in favor of the amendment changing the duty on all grades and kinds of wool to 25 per cent ad valorem.

Reagan's amendment was rejected—Yeas 22, nays 31. Brown and Payne voted no.

Vance moved a proviso that no article in the wool or woolen schedule should pay duty exceeding 75 per cent ad valorem, which was rejected, yeas 27 nays 33. Brown voted aye and Payne no.

The schedule for wood and willow ware was then taken up. Aldrich reported an amendment to paragraph 201, the words, "White pine $1.50 per 1,000 feet, board measure," which was agreed to.

Vest moved to amend paragraph 207, as to pine clap boards, by striking out the words "$2 per 1,000," and inserting the words "shall be admitted free of duty." Stockbridge opposed the Vest amendment.

Vance moved to amend Vest's amendment by making it apply to all lumber paragraphs.

Vest again took the floor and commented on trusts generally, and particularly on the fact that the great lumber trust was now in session in Michigan.

A lengthy colloquy of a political nature ensued and finally the question was taken on Vance's amendment, which was accepted by Vest as a substitute for his own and it was rejected, yeas 18, nays 28. Brown and Call voting against it.

Hiscock, on behalf of the finance committee, offered a proviso which was agreed to, that in case of the imposition of an export duty on sawed lumber by any foreign government the duty on such sawed lumber shall remain as under the present law.

Aldrich on behalf of the finance committee moved to insert after paragraph 209 the words: "Reeds 10 per cent ad valorem, shaft cane 15"; also to increase the duty on sawed boards, mahogany, etc., (paragraph 215) from 15 to 20 per cent ad valorem, which was agreed to.

Voorhees submitted some general remarks on trusts etc., principally in a political vein.

Sherman offered a proviso, which was agreed to, to paragraph 267 taxing fresh fish ¼ cent per pound making that duty not apply to fresh fish caught by citizens of the United States on the high seas or in open waters of the lakes forming a boundary between the United States and Canada.

Numerous amendments were reported from the finance committee and agreed to without objection. Among them the following. Reducing the duty on nickel ore or ore with nickel therein contained from 3 to 2 cents per pound, and on nickel in matte from 10 to 15 cents, reducing the duty on cocoa matting from 10 to 8 cents per square yard, and on cocoa mats from 5 to 4 cents per square foot, and amending the proviso to paragraph 152 so as to make it read. "That all iron or steel wire valued at more than 5 cents per pound instead of 10 cents shall pay a duty of not less than 35 per cent advalorem, and inserting in paragraph 417 (which imposes a duty of 35 per cent advalorem on manufacturers of leather, gutta percha, etc.) the words "Vulcanized India rubber known as hard rubber."

Vest moved to amend paragraphs 219 and 220 in the sugar schedules by reducing the rate on sugar above No 16 and not above No 20, Dutch standard from 1¼ to 1¼ cents per pound, and on sugar above No 20 from 2 cents to 1¾ cents, rejected—yeas 22, nays 31.

Reagan moved to amend the bill by adding as a section imposing a granted income tax which was rejected.

Paragraph 428 (calf skins, etc.) was amended by increasing ad valorem rates on sheep and goat skins from 25 per cent, and on skins from Morocco from 10 to 15 per cent. The amendments reported yesterday from the finance committee to paragraph 321 as to stockings, hose, etc., was agreed to.

Standford offered an amendment to the one heretofore introduced by him to authorize producers of pure sweet wines, who are also distillers, to use free of tax wine spirits necessary to fortify such pure sweet wines up to an alcoholic strength of 14 per cent. Agreed to.

An amendment heretofore offered by Brown to the rice paragraph was rejected on this vote: Senator Cameron voted with the democrats and Senators Bates, Berry, Blodgett, Cockrell, Coke, Faulkner, Harris, Jones of Arkansas, Reagan, Turpie, Vest and Walthall with the republicans. On motion of Aldrich the paragraph, 17, was finally amended by making rates on cleaned or uncleaned and broken rice or rice flour 1, 1¼ and 1¾ cents.

Plumb moved to insert an additional paragraph relating to a treasury department commission, to be known as the custom commission. Agreed to without division. It provides for appointment by the president with the advice and consent of the senate, of five commissioners, to hold office 2, 3, 4, [illegible]

[illegible] Nay. Yes 22, nays 30, as follows: Yeas—Aldrich, Blair, Brown, Cameron, Chace, Chandler, Cullom, Davis, Dawes, Dolph, Edmunds, Evarts, Farwell, Frye, Hawley, Hiscock, Hoar, Ingalls, Jones of Nevada, Manderson, Mitchell, Morrill, Paddock, Palmer, Platt, Plumb, Quay, Sherman, Spooner, Stockbridge, Teller, Wilson of Iowa. 22. Nays—Bate, Berry, Blackburn, Brown, Butler, Call, Cockrell, Coke, Colquitt, Daniel, Eustis, Faulkner, George, Gibson, Gorman, Gray, Harris, Jones of Arkansas, Morgan, Pasco, Payne, Pugh, Ransom, Reagan, Turpie, Vance, Vest, Voorhees, Walthall, Wilson of Maryland. 30. The senate at 8 p m adjourned.

HOUSE.

Some time was consumed in an endeavor by Crisp of Georgia to secure action on the contested election case of Sewall vs Elliott. The house refused to consider it after a delay of half an hour caused by filibustering by Cheadle of Indiana. The house then went into committee of the whole on the river and harbor bill.

After some filibustering McAdoo of New Jersey moved to strike out the appropriation for the improvement of Ahnapee harbor, Wisconsin. Advocates of other improvements talked in a desultory way for some time and McAdoo's motion was lost.

Adjourned.

Bayard on Samoa.

WASHINGTON, January 22.—Dispatches from London and Berlin in regard to the Samoan affairs which were published this morning were shown Secretary Bayard at the state department this afternoon with a view to obtaining some expression of opinion from him on the subject. His attention was specially invited to the statement that "Germany has come to a definite understanding with the United States which regard for Samoan and in reply he said: "Of course I expect Germany to live up to her honorable engagements with the United States but you will know these are matters I do not care to discuss in newspapers." When asked in regard to the policy of this government he referred the quest on to the president's message to congress of the 15th inst. and quoted from his letter to the German minister dated on the 12th inst and which was recently published as expressive of his own views upon the subject. The secretary also alluded to an agreement entered into between Great Britain and Germany in April, 1886, defining the boundaries of English and German dominion in the West Pacific ocean in which it is specially declared that the Samoan islands are neutral territory. The United States, he explained, has no joint treaty with either England or Germany in regard to the neutrality of Samoa. Therefore if Germany has interfered with the neutrality of that country she has not broken a treaty with the United States but has broken one with Great Britain.

Water on the Prairie.

TRINIDAD, Colo., January 22.—Twelve miles east of Trinidad, on the open prairie, at an altitude of 5,600 feet, a drill was put down 101 feet and a flow of water was struck which rose within forty feet of the surface in side of thirty minutes. A crevice or pocket so often encountered in this section had been passed through by the drill and this is supposed to allow the water to escape and prevent the overflow of the well. The experiment will be repeated in another place.

Stock Market.

NEW YORK, January 22.—There was less business done in the stock market to day, but outside of the animation of Atchison and strong investment stocks there was very little feature of any kind and after a general rise of fractional amounts in the forenoon prices generally retired to below those of last evening at the close, except Atchison, which closed with a net gain of 1¼. Governments dull and firm. Petroleum opened strong at 86½, but after advancing to 87 became heavy and the price sunged off to 86¼. Reaction then occurred on which the market closed firm at 86¼. The sales were 1,362,000 barrels.

A Fifteen Round Fight.

MINNEAPOLIS, January 22.—A fifteen round contest with small gloves Queensbury rules between Patsy Cardiff of Minneapolis and Jim Fell, champion of Michigan came off this evening. In the first four rounds Fell was the aggressor and got in some very heavy blows. Cardiff claimed first blood in the second round and in the next three rounds honors were about even but in the 8th Cardiff began to rush and did some effective work in that and succeeding rounds. In the 11th Fell seemed to weaken and most of his blows were not effective while Cardiff did some telling work. From this time it was apparent that Cardiff had the best of it. The fifteenth round was rough and tumble in which Fell tried hard to hold his own, even when forced against the ropes. Finally the men began to fight savagely clinching and wrestling in defiance of the referee's orders. Cardiff's friends claimed foul and the referee gave him the fight on that ground. Neither men were badly punished, although Cardiff's condition is the best.

They are accompanied by Mrs. Fred Hand, who it will be remembered is the daughter of Mrs. Kearney and the mother of little Jamie Hand who were so mysteriously murdered last spring near Edgerton. They left last night on the Santa Fe. Mrs. Hand has been in poor health ever since the discovery of the dreadful crime, and is going to California for a change of climate.

Dr. James A. Hart arrived in the city on Saturday from Japan via San Francisco. Accompanying him was Mrs. Alex Bonnell. They brought with them the remains of Mr. Bonnell, whose death occurred on shipboard some two weeks ago, near the Japanese coast. They will be taken east for interment. It is stated that Dr. Hart will return to this city in a short time and resume his medical practice, which he abandoned several years ago to accept a position as surgeon of a Pacific steamship.

Mr. R. B. Dell who will be remembered as an extensive contractor at the time of the building of the Midland road, yesterday brought to the city some fine specimens of ore taken from some newly discovered mines on Pulver mountain, near Howbert, on the line of the Colorado Midland. Mr. Dell has sunk to a depth of fifty feet in one of his mines, which he calls the "Yellow Diamond" and has found a vein of valuable mineral, some of it has been assayed and makes a good showing. It is to be still further experimented with. Several samples of the ore are on exhibition at the Midland ticket office.

GOATVILLE SOCIETY.

GOATVILLE IS ON MANHATTAN ISLAND AND IT IS A GREAT PLACE

A Real Paradise Where Cows Shanties and Poor Folks Live Rent Free in the Sight to Town

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—The fact is difficult to believe, and yet it is truer as death, that in this teeming city, where almost every inch of ground is worth its weight in yellow gold, there are a few house holders who pay no rent. This statement, however, does not necessarily imply an unusual condition of affairs on the part of those interested. It can safely be said, without fear of contradiction, that most of the renters of this article would rather pay rent than occupy the quarters presumed by these squatters. The persons referred to are for the greater part Irishmen, unfortunate flotsam and jetsam whom the tide of prosperity failed to float into the official chambers of the city government or other well paying stations. The particular locality is at the foot of East Seventy-second street. Here, upon the summit of a rock which overlooks the swirling currents of the East river, are [illegible] and some fifty shanties, built of almost every conceivable material, and mostly in the pure Irish style of architecture. The lover of the quaint and picturesque can find here his paradise. Herds of goats wander at will through the labyrinthine passages between the huts, and search in vain for a little of grass or any living thing, although across the rushing river they can see with tantalizing distinctness the velvety sward of Blackwell's Island.

Old boats have offered up their ribs for supports in these primitive houses. Boards which once did duty in a fence have destroyed the dignity of clapboards, their decaying fibers hidden by the everlasting whitewash. Old lattices over whose [illegible] bloomed the ruddy rose and the prohibition morning glory now [illegible] barrels [illegible] the [illegible] goat, and [illegible] to [illegible], "To what base uses are we come at last." And the roofs, thatched with straw, and the more pretentious indifferently covered with shingles, through the rotting fingers of which the rain drips [illegible] upon the beds and the stoves with [illegible] impertinity. "An old and worn [illegible] will fit in nicely here.

The rich can ride in [illegible]
An' th' poor [illegible]
The poor can walk!

The curious handet upon a rock is known in this locality by the [illegible] of Goatville. Every visitor to the spot is regarded with [illegible] as being a [illegible] official of the department of public works or a real estate agent coming to serve papers of ejectment. One evening a short time ago, when the wind, with winter in it, was whistling drearily through the streets and a typical New York sleet drizzle was falling, the writer paid a visit to Goatville in search of material for this article. He was accompanied by a young Hercules, the bully of the neighborhood, who acted as guide and protector for the [illegible] of fifty [illegible] his name was Tom Malone, and as he had thoroughly canvassed Goatville in the capacity of [illegible] agent [illegible] child and goat in Goatville. He carried for purely defensive purposes the spoke of a beaver's wagon. Before starting Tom filled his internal machinery with a big glass of raw whiskey. Wiping his mouth on his coat sleeve, he said by way of warning:

"Look a' here, Cyrus Widybuck, you said you was a reporter, didn't you? Now, I'll give it to you straight. Well, if I find you're tryin' to make me lies I'll give ye a tap wid this wheel spoke as 'll crack yer skull like an egg shell!"

When we arrived at the door of the Widow Murphy's shanty, Tom [illegible] a minute before knocking and repeated his warning as follows:

"Now, yer a good sure reporter an' no ballyraggin' afore we go further. Mind, I'll be as good as me word!"

The night was dark. Still, there was light enough for me to see that when I spoke cutting capers in the air above my head. After his fears were allayed, Tom knocked upon the door with his stick and a voice inside said:

"Come in."

The door opened into a room where Tom's head shook the ceiling. It contained a bed, a stove, a bureau, and upon the walls hung various cheap prints of a religious character. Mrs. Murphy, a woman of sixty, unkempt and robust, was lying prostrate upon the stove, and a pretty girl was seated upon the bed trying to read a letter by the light of a tallow candle.

"God save all here!" said Tom, in a satisfactory manner. Then, with a jerk of his thumb in the direction of the young woman and a wink he said:

"What's that yer a-doin', Mary?"

"A letter from me brother in Sing Sing," replied Mary, raising her pink and white face, which formed a setting for two eyes of Irish blue, to Tom. "Here, you read," she continued. "I'm no scholar."

Tom took the letter in his big hand and stood the wheel spoke against the bureau. Then he read a brief tale of an aching heart beating like a caged bird against prison bars; of a repentance which came too late; of clumsily expressed hopes of a better life when the time is up, which longed for period would not occur until one year from the last Christmas. And as he read the tears came down [illegible] in contrition and bad ink, Mrs. Murphy ceased turning the potatoes in the pan and drew near. A silence fell upon the little group gathered around the flickering candle, and struggling with the pattering of the rain on the stove and the singing of the tea kettle came a [illegible] sound as of a heart break from the lips of the mother whose only boy was a felon. Pretty Mary's eyes [illegible] began to grow humid. Apparently ashamed of her momentary weakness, Mary had hid her apron across her face as Tom handed her back the letter and said.

"Ah, what are yer mantheria about? There, he'll be home again' the snow falls a year from now."

Then Mary told how she had saved up [illegible] from her small earnings as a cigarette maker to make her brother a Christmas [illegible]. "And there," she [illegible] wish I had a hundred dollars to send him to our Mike."

By this time the ended Mrs Murphy's wrath had [illegible] me the work, and she [illegible]

[illegible] The pictures on the wall evidently [illegible] only as ornaments.

The hospitality of that humble home was great. Mary disappeared into the night with a tin can in her hand, and when she returned it were a three inch collar of foam. The crockery was not of china and was stained with cracks, yet it sufficed for the reception of the smoking hot fried pork, the loaf of baker's bread, the drawing of "O'rlong" tea and the brown beverage in the tin pail. The meal was enlivened by the gossip of Goatville, in which Mrs Murphy declared that the "next waddlin' duck of that shtrap Mrs Brady that comes inti my house 'll hav' his neck stretched wid me two hands." And while Mrs Murphy's attention was being taken up with her neighbor's ducks pretty Mary and Tom were carrying on a little amatory flirtation by squeezing hands under the table and other like foolishness of a forbidden character.

After the pipe of peace and goodfellowship was smoked, and the widow told how much money she received for her duck eggs and the price of live and dead goats. She said that the best customers for goats were the brewers, who wanted the animals for "horses for their children." The chief difficulty in the sale of a goat, she said, was its capture. According to her story, the goats possessed almost human intelligence, for as soon as a sale had been effected they kept aloof, and it was a difficult task to capture them.

* * *

But the night was wearing away and we had other calls to make. Mrs. Murphy lighted us to the door with the flickering candle, and even after we had gone 200 feet she stood in the doorway shaking the flickering flame with her calloused hand. When the door had closed Tom seized my shoulder in a vise like grip, and again uttered his warning.

"Now, see here, me fine gintleman, ye are not givin' me anny ghost story, are yi?Ather ye are a reporter or ye are not, that's shure. If ye are ye'll give me wid fairy tales, I'll"

The sentence was never finished, but the [illegible] filled the ellipsis with a frightful series of cuts through the air in close proximity to my ears. Then we went down a winding alley between two low fences stumbling over recumbent goats in the darkness, until we arrived at a low doorway, the lower panels of which were below the surface of the ground. Tom knocked, and without waiting for an answer he opened the door and we stepped in. The squalid room was draped in shadows. When my eyes became accustomed to the darkness I discovered two forms in the room by the feeble rays of a lantern which stood on the mantel. There was only one chair, and upon the wooden box was seated the tenant of the house, and beside him upon the floor was seated his wife. Both of these persons had barked their faces in their hands and they were moaning in a blood curdling fashion. In a corner of the room stood a sullen boy of 17.

"Mr. Callahan," said Tom, tapping the man of the house upon the shoulder with the weapon spoke, "I bring Mr. Fowler, a friyer friend of mine from the city hall, up here t' see could he get yo th' cows back agin!"

This speech was followed by a snort from the boy in the corner, who blurted out:

"Don't believe him, father. He's a lyin' reporter he's bringing here t' put ye in th' paper!"

With an angry scowl upon his face, Tom leaped across the room. He seized the boy around the body, carried him to the door, and, with the help of a kick which was like that of a mule, landed him fifteen feet from the shanty. Then shaking his wagon spoke in the direction of the disconsolate lad, he said:

"Ye can thank me good nature fur not batin' in yer thick head." Then turning around as if he had done a meritorious act in expelling a man from his own house, he continued:

"Now, Mr. Fowler, go on wid your story."

By degrees I drew out of Mr. Callahan the facts in regard to the cows. It appears that he was one of the oldest residents in Goatville. For many years he had held a comparatively lucrative position in Central park, but had lost his job through political changes. Then he had bought two milch cows for $60, "I'm in a mortgage of $30 upon them, Peter, sor," said he, "I used to peddle th' milk around to my naybors, an' what wid th' [illegible] an' th' malary I couldn't raise th' mortgage. It's only yesterday, sor, that th' man as held the papers kem around here an' took me cows. An' now, how what'll I do an' me could [illegible] an' th' by but starve. Shure th' hunger is under me feet an' gnawin' me an' th' cows goin' down th' road. Musha sor, but there's hard times fur thim as has nayther money nor cowsl"

The old man resumed his dejected position with his head in his hands. But even in his misfortune he didn't fail to repeat the fact that he had no bottle containing "the drinkin' soothin'" in the cupboard.

As Tom and I parted at the railway station the last words I heard as I hurried up the stairs to catch a train were:

"An' yo shure ye're a?" The rest was lost in the rattle of approaching wheels.

Affairs at Zanzibar.

ZANZIBAR, January 22.—The Arabs have made the evacuation of the coast by the Germans the first condition upon which the release of the missionaries captured by them is dependent. The naval garrisons at Dar and Saleim have been compelled to withdraw, owing to the outbreak of fever. Further fighting occurred at Bagamoyo on Saturday. The coast Arabs are jubilant over the recent victories and captures. The Italian warship Dogal has been withdrawn from the blockade. Large shipments of arms and ammunition are arriving from Belgium, England and Germany. The British Indians are preparing a petition demanding compensation for the ruin brought upon the trade by the fighting between insurgents and Germans.

Coke Bill Rejected.

IMPRESSIONS OF PARIS

A Well Known American Novelist on the City of Cities

[Correspondence by Telegraph to Sun.]

PARIS, January 12, 1889.

When I first saw Paris, fifteen years ago, the Republic was quite infancy, and from its birth amid clamors of shot and shell and blood, while the awful horror of the commune still showed itself upon the faces of the people who had taken part in or witnessed it, and in the signs of destruction everywhere visible. The column Vendome was on the ground, the Hotel de Ville and the Tuileries and a part of the Palais Royal and Louvre were in ruins or greatly damaged, and sad eyed women pointed out the spot where their husbands and sons, who had taken no part in the fray, were shot down by the maddened mob because suspected of sympathy with the peace loving citizens.

My little girl of three years old was taken from her father's arm and dropped upon the pavement, while he was murdered just in front of the Hotel du Louvre, although he had been at home through the fight and only ventured out when he thought it was "over," one woman said to me, while others told of narrow escapes from bullets crashing through their windows, and of the rain of stones and bricks and of fearful cries and shrieks which made some of the streets and boulevards a second pandemonium.

But all this was in the past, and Paris was beautiful in the midst of her desolation and seemed to me Paradise, on the August afternoon when I took my first drive through the Champs Elysees and out into the Bois de Boulogne, where war had also left its footprints.

"Oh, you should have seen it during the empire," was often said to me then; and after a lapse of fifteen years comments of many of the people are much the same. The empire dies hard, for Bourbons and Imperialists are hardly expected to see a republic anything better than was found in the old regime; and the tired people sighs for the days of the court when there were more fetes, more balls, more parties, and the glamor and gorgeousness of royalty were over all. To their minds the republic is an upstart, an interloper, with no right to reign and rule. "We want a swell, and not one of ourselves to govern us," is said by those who have been so long accustomed to monarchy that, like the old trained horse who, when turned out to pasture, needs for himself a ring round which he patiently plodded so many hours each day. They feel lost without it, and look upon anything new with distrust.

But to an outsider Paris seems to have taken long strides in improvement since the days when the streets were red with blood and people's hair turned white with the horror of it. Bright and gay and beautiful it must always be, with more to give for one's money than can be found in any other city on the globe. But aside from the beauty and the gaiety and the brightness, there is apparent everywhere a marked improvement in matters of far more consequence than just what pleases the eye. The streets are cleaner than of old, and there are everywhere signs of the same thrift which characterizes the young cities of America. The people seem happier and more contented, while the faces of the lower class—the riff raff—who filled the ranks of the commune, wear a far more human expression.

Especially is this the case with the children in whom fifteen years ago the fierce passions and the hatred of every one above them, which incited the commune, had not died out, and who were the terror of every well dressed woman and child in the streets. To run us down seemed to be their object, and I can recall many a flock of frightened women, of which I was one, fleeing before them, while they laughed at our consternation, secure in their knowledge that if we were run over we would pay for it rather than they. Now, however, it is different, and cabbie deigns to give warning of his approach with a cry almost as terrifying as the sound of his horse's hoof.

Where are all the policemen? is a question often asked by Americans and English, but never satisfactorily answered. I suppose they exist, but where I did not know. Late in the afternoon one or two can sometimes be found at the points where the traffic is the thickest, but usually the people are left to their own devices as to the best method of keeping themselves from being trampled down by the horses or crushed beneath the wheels. This, however, will undoubtedly be remedied in time and the policeman become as familiar a figure as he is in the streets of New York.

One marked improvement in the outward morals of the city is evident in the closing of most of the places of business, and the partial cessation of work on Sunday. Why Paris is reforming and no longer the wickedest city in the world, Chicago is ahead, was the comment of a young man when contrasting the Paris of to-day with the Paris of a few years ago. And I think he was right for whether Chicago has got ten ahead or not in wickedness Paris is [illegible] the gain, and those who [illegible] hear her cough, but can't catch [illegible] pneumonia or consumption, find fewer things to shock their ideas of right or wrong than heretofore when Sunday seemed almost as busy as a week day. Amused the French [illegible] always [illegible] you would keep them quiet and happy [illegible] the masses, largely on Sunday, and strangers fresh from America are at first astonished at the operas and plays and horse races and dances which mark Sunday a holiday, and then, as if [illegible] once which rolls between them and the church bells of home had washed away all the cold time not one some of them become quite as French with the French themselves, so far as Sunday amusements are concerned.

Begging has almost entirely ceased in the city, or shows itself at rare intervals and during a stay of seven weeks I have seen but one genuine beggar with the regulation whine and made up face. Plenty of poor there are, but means are provided for their necessities, or they are supplied with work.

Fifteen years ago a dressmaker said to me: "In your country the men support the women, but in Paris the women support the men who spend their time sitting on the sidewalk in front of hotels and restaurants, drinking and smoking and staring at the passers by." This might have been true but they must be at work now, for except in front of the Grand hotel, to avoid passing which many a woman would willingly go a block out of her way, there are fewer idle men sitting upon the sidewalks and staring at the passers by; and, however much the men may drink, I have never seen a drunken person in the street, or anything like rowdyism, even when the excitement was at its highest.

In this respect I think the French remarkable. Vivacious and excitable, and as prone to flare up at a moment's notice as lucifer matches are, yet the [illegible] amusements

J. W. SCOTT, Editor.

Mr. Crosby, a member of the New York legislature, has introduced a bill in that body requiring the publication of an itemized statement of moneys expended in all campaigns within ten days after each election. The passage of the bill is unlikely, and its enforcement, even if it does pass, next to impossible.

An Illinois paper wants to know why North Dakota cannot be called Uncapapa, while the New York Sun advocates christening it Pembina. The principal reason for not giving it either of the names is because the people who reside there, and who therefore are most interested in its name than either the Sun or the Illinois paper, wish it called North Dakota.

Governor Hovey of Indiana makes the suggestion that the books used in the public schools of that state be made free. He estimates that the cost to the state will be less than $2 for each pupil. The system of free text-books has been tried in several cities of the east and it is generally considered a successful one. Governor Hovey's suggestion is a good one and might well be followed not only in Indiana but in other states. Education can never be too free.

Bishop Newman, General Grant's old clerical friend, made an address recently in Charleston, S. C. The old gentleman seems to have stumbled on to politics in the course of his remarks, for he said:

In the rural districts of [illegible] states, there was a genuine alarm felt lest Cleveland should be re-elected and the papal see established in the United States. This apostle of Methodism was so great that life long I have voted for Harrison.

There have been several reasons assigned to Cleveland's defeat, but this is a new one.

Mr. Clunie, the democrat who holds a certificate of election to congress from the Fifth California district has lately given a proof of an honesty which is as commendable as it is rare in the dirty ditch of politics. On the first count of the vote in Mr. Clunie's district he seemed to have a majority and was given the certificate by the governor. The recount however seemed to show that his majority had been obtained by fraud. Mr. Clunie promptly sent word to his republican opponent, Mr Phelps, that he wished a recount of the vote to be made in the presence of representatives of each candidate. And if it was found that Phelps had received a majority Mr Clunie offers to personally assist the republican candidate in the contest for the seat before the committee on elections. It is the custom for candidates for office, while they may not directly assist in the perpetration of fraud, to aid in their election to make every effort to make the result obtained by fraud hold good. But Mr. Clunie is evidently an honorable exception to the rule. If it is found that he is fairly elected, the people of California's Fifth congressional district will have a representative whose honesty and integrity need never be questioned.

At a time when there is so much discussion of the question of where General Harrison will take his secretary of the treasury from, it is interesting to look back over our past history and see where the men who filled this important office under former administrations came from. The Philadelphia Press says.

In the hundred years of our federal existence secretaries of the treasury have come from all sections; some good and some indifferent, but it has appeared only in few instances that these officials have been much warped by local influences. Efficiency and ability were not questions of section. In the twelve years of the government under Washington and Adams the treasury chiefs came from New York, Connecticut and Massachusetts. Jefferson got some distance away from that when he took Gallatin from the other side of the Alleghenies. Gallatin was in office for twelve years: was succeeded for a few months by a Tennessee man and he in turn by Dallas, another Pennsylvanian. Monroe got his secretary of the treasury from Georgia, but John Quincy Adams returned to Pennsylvania for his and took Rush. Jackson had four secretaries, including Ingham and Duane of Pennsylvania, McLane of Maryland and Woodbury of New Hampshire. The latter was continued throughout his term.

General Harrison's grandfather brought his secretary of the treasury from Ohio—his own state—before the close of the Tyler administration. Pennsylvania, New York and Kentucky were represented in the finance department. The senate refused to confirm the appointment of Caleb Cushing, of Massachusetts. Polk's secretary was a Mississippi free trader, who drew the whole administration into his net including Dallas and Buchanan, of this state. Taylor named Meredith of Pennsylvania and he, under Fillmore, was succeeded by Corwin of Ohio. Pierce's secretary was from Kentucky and Buchanan's until within a few months of the end of his term, from Georgia.

When Lincoln came into office he secured from Ohio one of the ablest financiers the country has ever known. Lincoln afterwards made a selection from Maine, and finally one from Indiana the latter being continued under Johnson. Grant had several treasury secretaries but, with the exception of one from Kentucky, they were all eastern men. Hayes took his secretary from his own state, and a right good secretary he was. Garfield was the first president to go beyond the Mississippi for the head of the treasury, naming a Minnesotian. Arthur filled his first vacancy in that department with a New York man, although the secretary during the closing months of his administration was from Maryland. Both of Cleveland's secretaries came from New York.

THE EVERGLADES

Interesting Regarding a Little Known Part of Florida.

(Special Correspondence.)

JACKSONVILLE, Jan. 22.—The everglades of Florida haveever been an peculiar interest for me since I saw them on the maps in the district school. I have looked on them with awe as the dwelling of all that is vile and dangerous in nature, but always wished to penetrate them. The everglades comprise an area of [illegible] square miles, [illegible] at present, but extremely [illegible]. They [illegible] the appearance of an aquatic jungle, wild, weird and tangled in a wonderful mass of semi-tropic vegetation, entwined with masses of coral rocks. As a pretty creative wanderer and Mr Chauncey M. Depew once facetiously dubbed me as "the great American traveler," I have never met any area so intangled and impenetrable. The New York Herald expedition failed to penetrate them. Gen Chase crossed them recently a mile [illegible] time between the upper and lower everglades from Miami to Waldy, Hepburn Landing. The Times Democrat expedition, projected by Maj Edward A. Burke, under Maj A. F. Wilson, was the most successful exploration ever made in them. It was [illegible] south line which fairly divided them. The [illegible] southern everglades are most interesting, presenting the appearance of a wild inland sea, with innumerable islands and rocky projections and of flooring, intertwined vegetation. On the [illegible] are beautiful cottage palms with wide, overhanging tops that look like inverted umbrellas, wild figs, logwood trees and custard apples. These islands are usually a crust underneath which is become mud. The sky is almost invisible because of swarms of noxious insects. Snakes and alligators abound beyond estimate. An entrance to the glades is everywhere cut off by miles of scrub willows, saw grass and custard apples growing in dense [illegible] and intertwined with gourd and other vines. The flutter of bird and insect life is like the sand storm of the Sahara in places, and in others the air seems to be free. The most terrible inhabitant of the region is the mosquito, which fatally [illegible] the water lily. It swarms thickly in the water and stings fiercely with bites and pricks where it feeds in contact with it, even through the clothing. Vast flocks of ducks, and of aquatic and semi-aquatic birds exist here, water alligating and are too infested with fish and game to be of value as food. Water turkeys, [illegible] and alligators make the night hideous with cries and clap of wings. Swarms on swarms crawl out of the earth over the land in all forms and disciplines, bugs, ticks, lice and other animal life in size, but terrible in venom, drop on the coat and pant of the hammock and steal down over the person while the baying of alligators, the hiss of owls, the cries of water turkeys and the din of insect pests prevent the traveler from enjoying an undisturbed repose. Leeches by the thousand attack the [illegible] failing to reach the flesh crawl up the [illegible] for a favorable opening. The [illegible] make actively opposition the intruder; the mud is [illegible] and of unknown depth, and the [illegible] explorer's way is [illegible] slowly and entirely long.

An [illegible] with a [illegible] is a curiosity not [illegible] to exist yet there is such a [illegible] in Florida. There is a lake six miles south of Tallahassee. It is [illegible] long in high water and [illegible] during low water, and here is the [illegible] of the [illegible]. The [illegible] differ in size and shape, but the first great [illegible] was in place until August, 1840. At that time some [illegible] were fishing not far from the north end. Suddenly a loud [illegible] was heard, and their little boat began to [illegible] in a large circle, the center of which deepened in the form of a funnel. Soon their craft began to revolve so rapidly that the party got frightened and started for the shore. The negroes had a difficult voyage, as the revolution rapidly [illegible] in size and power. They succeeded in time and turned to look at the disappearance. [illegible] the roar became terrific and attracted not only all the slaves on the great Jackson estate [illegible] the lake, but the attention of the white people as well. It was several days before the waters calmed down, and then it was discovered that the lake had lowered from [illegible] in length to twelve [illegible] along the Ocklockonee, five miles away, were terrified by an [illegible] tidal wave, as they at first supposed it to be, but which proved to be the departing waters of Jackson lake. The river during the [illegible] was swollen to more than twice its usual size. After the lake calmed down the [illegible] reminded the [illegible] of the [illegible] town. A [illegible] hole was found to have been excavated in the bottom of the lake in the form of a cave. It had been [illegible] with fish, eels, alligators and debris of [illegible], which proved fortunate, as it saved the lake from destruction. During the next seven years the lake gradually rose to its former level, then for [illegible] years it lowered gradually to the level established by the mysterious. This remarkable alternation has continued regularly since. I visited the lake last winter and spent several weeks hunting and fishing in the vicinity. The lake at that time was at its lowest. I was told by the natives that the time had arrived for it to begin the first of its seven years' rise. Finally it did begin to rise, and before I left it had risen two feet, which gives a surface of [illegible] square miles. [illegible]

Chauncey Depew.

In an interview with George W. Childs of the Philadelphia Ledger the conversation turned to President Cleveland. "I think he has made a safe conservative president," said he. "I was only to support him in the Ledger for a re-election until he went to congress his tariff message. It was writing to my mind he made a great mistake. There are points about Mr Cleveland's likeable which inspire in me warm of interest. I met the president at Dolly Dodge's city house in Washington. Mr Cleveland bore the president's household around and introduced me to Mrs Cleveland. I had nominated Mr Cleveland at St Louis in an eloquent presentation and had displayed warm friendship for him. Then there is Mr Sargent, the editor of the Record. He supported Cleveland and contributed largely in money to aid his cause. Recently he was in Washington. He saw Mr Cleveland and when he came back he confessed to me that he was a cold man. I recall again that upon an occasion an effort was made to have a great grandson of Governor Morris appointed a pension examiner or something of the kind. Governor Morris was a revolutionary hero. While General Washington occupied the Morris mansion, Mr Morris furnished the money. The place young Morris wanted has been filled by one who had died. Until the appointment was made he was acting. I went to Secretary Bayard an old friend and in the office he acknowledged the letter and said he would do what he could to have the young man appointed. However, was not appointed. I mention this to show the president's want of tact. So general was the feeling against the application to the requests of others that he forced himself into the attitude of not having a personal following or friend.

BASE BALL.

Delegates to State Clubs Form a League

Representatives of different base ball clubs of the state met in this city yesterday and organized a state league. The meeting was called in room 216 at The Antlers, and there were present Mr James McLaughlin, representing Denver clubs Mr W H Hughes and G W Whyte, representing Leadville, and Messrs F T Lent, H S Woodruff, A C Schlessinger and Harry Goddard of the Colorado Springs association.

A temporary organization was effected by electing H S Woodruff chairman and A C Schlessinger secretary. After some preliminary talk it was decided to organize a state league under the rules of the National league agreement. Mr Woodruff then offered a resolution setting forth an order of business for the meeting which was adopted.

Upon a motion of McLaughlin it was decided to call the association the Colorado State League. The organization immediately proceeded to the election of permanent officers, which resulted as follows: President, H. S. Woodruff, of Colorado Springs, secretary, James McLaughlin, of Denver; treasurer, G. W. Whyte, of Leadville.

A discussion arose as to the advisability of not allowing carrying an umpire, or of appointing one in each city; as to the advisability of paying umpires at the rate of $3 or $5 a game, and as to whether the vote of two clubs should be enough to depose an umpire. It was finally decided that those were matters for the executive committee to decide.

On motion of Whyte, of Leadville, each club joining the league is required to place a deposit of $100 with the treasurer as a guarantee of good faith. This will probably be given to the winner of the pennant as a prize at the end of the season.

After considerable discussion, it was decided upon a motion by Woodruff, that the salary of any player shall not exceed $75 a month, and the clubs are not to be limited in the number of players. This arrangement is not to be broken either in letter or spirit, on penalty of losing a forfeit.

A motion prevailed that an executive committee composed of one from each club entering the league should meet in this city on the 20th of March to adopt a constitution and by laws to govern the organization and to arrange a schedule of dates for games. It was also decided to collect a fee of $10 from each club before that day.

It was also decided to play upon the guarantee system. A guarantee of $40 a game is to be made to the visiting club, except for games on holidays, when the receipts are to be divided equally.

A general discussion ensued regarding base ball matters, and the meeting adjourned. All of those present seemed to be confident that the league would be a great success. It is intended to start if no more than four clubs enter the league, but it is hoped that there will be at least eight teams enter.

E. P.

To the Editor of the Gazette.

The kitchen as the home is the corner of the social fabric, so is the kitchen within the home, the laboratory from which proceed the essential elements of right living. The philosopher, the poet, the merchant, the mechanic—all the forces that work for the well-being and progress of the world, depend upon the nourishment of the body by well cooked food, and the engineer who regulates the supply of vital steam in the stock Horse Power have never contributed to the substance and strength of many a—individual—who—was said to give of his strength. The thoughtful have long since waked to the fact that the intemperance of the poor is mainly the result of craving for the support that will carry them through their working day—a support often denied them in their home meals. The untrained wives who know nothing of the relation of supply to demand are too anxious to satisfy the perverted taste for fried tough meats, and extracts that assume the value of coffee, though they have it not. The man goes forth to his work, his jaws having been exercised without profit to his stomach, and after a few hours his expenditure of force is proportioned for the time of the drain. The plaintiffs of the prosperous home also too often has had no training for the important office she has assumed. I have heard mothers say, "It is time enough for my girls to know of the kitchen when they are married, then it will come to them." Never was there a more popular delusion than that of waiting for an inspiration in practical affairs. No father would dream of allowing his son to lack preparation for their life work. The seeds of incapacity that have been germinating for generations are now developed into the most universal evil of the day, the burning question—"How shall domestic service be made what it should be?" Now prevent the waste of money, the waste of gastric force that is drawn upon for the indigestible? The subjection of the masters to the rule of ignorance and insolence, and to often the want of knowledge of a mistress created a dominancy ruinous to the purse and peace of home. Institutions of that dominance are numerous in houses where there is not sufficient wealth—to consider an economical check, or as a check to the outlay, or where the mistress has not health to exercise her knowledge. If she possesses it the cook is left to "order" supplies of the despeople to do as she pleases with what which is ordered, and if she has not erred upon that situation a dishonest man she can rarely escape the temptation to become one. The invariable topic of conversation among housekeepers is the inadequacy of the cook of the growing insolence of her demands, and the newspapers with as daily items anecdotes of insolence and rapacity that are true seeming most satirical. Is there no remedy, no check for this devasting march of incompetency? Our public school system has been responsible for much of it in not sooner realizing that practical training. Supplementating—I had almost said supplanting the kind of training as a needed step in the right direction. And everywhere over the land the thoughtful women are giving themselves to the practical work of establishing and conducting cooking classes where the lady herself shall be taught that the kitchen is not a den by saying—a laboratory where science at least, and even artistic taste have ample field for experiment like a little heaven leavening the lump. That earnest purpose of faithful women must prevail and the progress will be toward the revelation to the ignorant of unused faculties, toward the dignifying of what has been considered menial, toward the perception of neglected opportunities and privileges which will offer to women in her being a kingdom of blessedness. A.

On Sunday Mr James O Read who for the past year has conducted the Delmonico restaurant left the city taking with him his little boy and his dog. His wife was left in this city and she was becoming alarmed at their absence, when on Monday night she received a letter from him dated at Denver. It stated that he was going away and would probably not return, and thought that it would be just as well not to search for him. He also sent in his resignation as an officer of the P O S. of A on Monday night. Yesterday Mrs. Read began an investigation into the affairs of the restaurant. She found that there were only a few small bills outstanding, and she has decided to continue the business in her own name. The restaurant will be continued just as it has been and Mrs Read will settle all bills. Mr. Read's friends are very much puzzled with his action, as there was no scandal connected with his departure and he took very little money. He informed no one in the city of his intentions. The little boy is about six or seven years of age.

The annual "Bachelors' Ball" was given at The Antlers last night. It was probably the largest and most successful affair of its kind ever given in this city. The decorations in the dancing hall were extensive and effective. Koenigsborg's orchestra, of Denver, furnished the music.

The first lesson in practical cooking will be given at the Woman's Exchange to-day, and the luncheon lesson to-morrow.

There Is No One in the Capital of the Unit[illegible] More Interesting Than These Queer, Yellow [illegible] Men of the Flowery Kingdom

(Special Correspondence.)

WASHINGTON, Jan 14.—In all the strangely diversified social and official life of the capital there are no [illegible] more interesting than the members of the Chinese legation. It is the largest legation here, and its [illegible] in maintaining [illegible] tation at the American capital larger sums of money than [illegible] of the largest [illegible] in the city, the Chinese [illegible]

[illegible] LEGATION.

[illegible] built by Senator [illegible] on Dupont circle, just [illegible] the site from Mr. [illegible] Though the house is a very large one, it is none too large for the legation which [illegible] and with [illegible] make up a household of [illegible] than fifty [illegible] Following is an official list of the members of the legation:

Mr. Chen Yen Hoon, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary; Mr. Shu Chi Fon, first secretary, Mr. Jui Yuan, secretary; Mr. Tung Kwang Ju, [illegible]; Mr. D. W. [illegible] Mr. Koo Shao Ping, [illegible] Mr. Tao [illegible] Mr. Yew Jiar Shao, [illegible] Mr. Chen Chi Tong, [illegible] Mr. Li Chun Kwan, [illegible] Mr. Chen Kuh Ping, [illegible] Mr. Mo Wang Yuen, [illegible] Mr. Shu Chi [illegible] Mr. Chen Hsun Mooen, [illegible] Mr. Chi [illegible] Pung.

"We have a very large and very happy family here," said Secretary Shu [illegible] and the men are very [illegible] they do have. There is just [illegible] to make them relish their [illegible] pipe this also too. It was by [illegible] you know, that the [illegible] of the diplomatic [illegible] country, one of the [illegible] young Chinaman can win."

Civil service reformers.

"Yes, indeed. [illegible] civil service for [illegible] of [illegible] All [illegible] men who have [illegible] literary [illegible] Boys of [illegible] very [illegible] are still for that matter. But [illegible] good [illegible] and [illegible] opinion and great [illegible]

[illegible] The [illegible] in China are engaged in by men of all [illegible] and a young [illegible] who had have a few years ago told me the [illegible] of his own triumph at the [illegible] was darkened [illegible] by his friends [illegible] This was his [illegible] failure, and is boldly his [illegible] failure, while a man may count as often as he [illegible] four failures is about as large a [illegible] as anybody is willing to endure. The [illegible] of rich [illegible] have to go the [illegible] of poor men, but, of course, one hears all [illegible] in the [illegible] and asking for [illegible]

"We have a very large staff of [illegible] The [illegible] of the house is chiefly [illegible] though there are a good many Chinese [illegible] in the kitchen. American [illegible] are used in the [illegible] rooms. We [illegible] both Chinese and colored [illegible] and [illegible] get along nicely together. The [illegible] very fond of American [illegible] and so we [illegible] a good Chinese cook too. On the dinner table you will see a rather odd blending of Chinese and American [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] discussions over the relative merits of the national viands. Mince pie is the subject of [illegible] fully [illegible] and the young men are getting to be very fond of it."

"Are [illegible] really bright men?"

—They are the brightest men in the [illegible] They are men who are sure to make their mark in diplomacy, who would make their mark in anything and in anywhere. The minister is a great statesman. When these [illegible] over here they exhibit a rather unusual trait. Almost without exception they [illegible] feel their own superiority over Americans and their superiority of their country over this. They are not offensively proud or self-assertive, but unknowingly so. One [illegible] in them the traditions of [illegible] of years. But after they have been here a few weeks their [illegible] begin to change. They begin to be influenced by what they see. They are the [illegible] in the world. Nothing escapes them and they are equal to learn and imitate. Take pen[illegible]ship, for example. We have a young Chinaman here who has been in America only one year [illegible] in China before coming over, who [illegible] the most beautiful English lever saw. He takes an exquisite copper plate [illegible] words and [illegible] whose meaning he does not know. It is the imitative faculty in a faculty which has also [illegible] development in the Chinese. Every Chinaman who visits this country carries back with him a head full of [illegible] which he proposes to introduce at home, after making improvements on them. Our young men [illegible] tire of driving about the city, visiting public depots and business and manufacturing establishments. They are [illegible] by the American theatre, the great government printing office and the patent office."

[illegible] is the time of the year [illegible] chiefly occupied with letter writing. The Chinese are the greatest letter writers in the world. Family and personal letters are a [illegible] enough but official letters [illegible] there is no end. Letters of respect, congratulation in promotion, birthdays, anniversaries, are continually passing between officials in China and members of the legation here. A [illegible] official Chinese letter is that [illegible] the paper and [illegible] indicates the rank of the writer. The most common colors are the various shades of red. The superscription of a Chinese [illegible] has the name after the titles, and all the titles are usually put on. Just [illegible] to this which I read from an envelope [illegible] to go out in today's mail.

> A member of the imperial family of his majesty the emperor of China, imperial commissioner, a junior grand tutor of the heir apparent, a president of the board of war, and governor general of the two Kiangs, Chi[illegible]

"Tell me something about the members of the legation."

"Well, Mr. Chen Yen Hoon, the [illegible] is a very [illegible] man in the Chinese [illegible]. He is 50 years old, a native of Canton, and was decorated with the red button of the second rank and the peacock feather for service in putting down rebellion. He held the office of taotai, or intendant of circuit, with supervision of [illegible] and [illegible] grand judge. He is a man of great [illegible] and [illegible] mental vigor.

"Shu Chen Pon, the first secretary, is a man of middle age and [illegible] ability. Secretary Jui Yuan is under 30, and a [illegible] of the 3d [illegible] nobles, from whom [illegible] the emperor's [illegible]. He is a [illegible] of Marquis Ki, who was governor [illegible] and later president of the [illegible]. His father, Gen Kuo, is now [illegible] chief of the Mongolian army—the [illegible] of the army of China. Secretary Jui Yuan [illegible] together for [illegible] against the [illegible] along the A[illegible].

"The [illegible] of the legation is known to the [illegible] as Ho Shen Chen, the [illegible] and a very popular man in Washington society. He is 35 years old, a [illegible] accomplished gentleman and [illegible] button of the fifth rank. He received an English education at Hong Kong. He always [illegible] the [illegible] in official or social [illegible] and is a charming conversationalist. Dr. Yow Jiar Shao is an accomplished physician, fully familiar with the literature of medicine. He has charge of the health of the legation, including the Chinese [illegible]. Several of the attaches are military men, here for the purpose of studying the American military [illegible].

"The Chinese [illegible] regards a brilliant [illegible] at the [illegible] New Year [illegible] [illegible] and the people who saw them there would have had a great admiration for their courtesy if they had understood the signal conveyed by their manner. Dress means much with the Chinese in official life, even among civilians. Probably you can see the red coral button in the cap of the minister. He would no more think of appearing on any occasion in a straw hat or any [illegible] without that button than he would think of walking from here to China. In the Chinese civil service there are nine ranks, and promotions are made from one to the other. Officials of the ninth class wear a plain copper button, of the eighth class a copper button of another pattern, of the seventh class a copper button gilt and burnished, of the sixth class a button of white stone, of the fifth class, a crystal button, of the fourth class, a button of pale blue, of the third class, a button of lapis or sapphire, of the second class, a crystal coral button, like our minister's, and of the first class, a perfectly plain coral button. This last is worn by members of the imperial council."

ON CONNECTICUT AVENUE.

The newspapers a few days ago contained news from Chinese of the official selection of [illegible] brides for the young emperor. I endeavored to question one of the English speaking attaches about this, but he lifted his hands in horror and replied:

"We do not discuss the emperor and his family. It is not allowed by official etiquette. On first coming to this country we are shocked by the freedom with which officials discuss their rulers, their [illegible]. Americans cannot understand the awe in which our emperor is held. Everything possible is done to add to the dignity and sacredness of our emperor's person. The common people are forbidden to use most of the things used by him, and many articles are reserved for him alone by color or some distinguishing mark. The outer gate of our emperor's palace must always be [illegible] on foot, and to us the case with which an audience is granted of your president is quite astonishing. Our emperor's throne, or even a sheet of yellow silk thrown over a chair, receives the beauty [illegible] of the people as typical of the sovereign. It is not long now since official communications from the emperor to this legation were received with bowing of the head in prostrations. Your presidential elections are very amusing to us."

"But about the concubines?"

"By law our majesty is allowed nine concubines. Every third year he receives the [illegible] his own subjects. When the emperor is young the empress dowager makes the selections. It is that which has just been done. Three years [illegible] the emperor [illegible] selected [illegible] The [illegible] daughters of the [illegible] officers must be over 12 years old."

"Does your sovereign have a hundred newspaper men watching him and helping him form his cabinet?"

"O no. Needless discussion of our majesty's cabinet making. His cabinet [illegible] between 7 and 15 o'clock in the morning."

"Can very poor men rise to the highest official station in your country?"

"Yes. We once had a premier who was a coolie laborer's son. When he died finally discarded him he was found to be the possessor of $100,000,000 in [illegible] and [illegible]

SOME CURIOSITIES OF OLD NEW AMSTERDAM

The [illegible] of New York's [illegible] of Their [illegible] The [illegible] The First Hotel

(Special Correspondence.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—New York's first most popular hotel building put up over 250 years ago was a horse mill. It was located on what is now South William street, near Pearl. The lift was used as a church. When most of the houses in this city were of bark and thatched with [illegible] was built on this island by two Belgian ship builders, a ship of 80 tons burden. It was the wonder of Europe [illegible] and the [illegible] before another of like size was built in this country.

The timber was cut from the ground on which Wall street now stands. New York's first schoolmaster, Adam Roelandsen, could not make a living at his vocation, so he took to washing. He lived on what is now Stone street. He turned out a bad man and was flogged in public and fired out of the country. Wouter Van Twiller's chief Dutch governor, farm extended from Wall to Rivington street. Broad street was a [illegible]. Near it stood the town gallows. On this gallows they used to hoist by the waist band those convicted of minor offenses and leave them to swing for hours for punishment and the public enjoyment. The first grant of New York's real estate was that of sixty-two acres to Roelof Jans. It began south of Warren street, extending along Broadway as far as Duane street, to the northwesterly a mile and a half to Christopher street. This was the original conveyance of the Trinity church property. Warren street was named after Sir Peter Warren, a British admiral of note. Rector [illegible] street is called after Trinity, a lawyer [illegible] one hundred years ago. Vesey perpetuates the name of the Rev. Willian Vesey, a Trinity church clergyman who was always in a row with one or more of the king's governors of New York and actually refused to pray for them in church. Barclay street is named after one of Trinity's clergymen. Governor's Island was originally known as Nutten Island. Two hundred years ago the land between it and Long Island was easily forded at low tide. When the tide was so [illegible] the average price of a horse was $166 and that of a cow $16.

Cornelius Dirkse started Fulton ferry in 1637 with a canoe. He had a fast near Peck slip, and a horn tied to a tree near his ferry house. When any one desired to cross they tooted the horn for Cornelius. His charge for ferriage was three stivers in wampum. Pearl street was then a country road directly on the East river bank. Water, Front and South streets [illegible] then all under water. Clams were then dug on the edge of Pearl street. That was the first land occupied for [illegible] purposes. The Dutch cows laid it out. It was the cattle's winding way to and from the pasture on the Water pond, near the Tombs now. That pond was so deep enough to float a ship. A creek ran from it into the North river. Afterward the creek was turned into a canal. Finally filled in as far as Canal street. All that is now left of this water way is Canal st. The first hotel was put up in 1642. It was located on the north side of Pearl street, near Coenties slip, and fronted the East river. It became afterward the first city hall, and from it on a Sunday morning the City Fathers used to be [illegible] to church by a bell [illegible] and [illegible] their [illegible] of state. They sat on the [illegible] in a pew by themselves and [illegible] the city without salaries. During that time travelers of [illegible] with the governor, travelers of no [illegible] slept on the floor of a little Dutch tavern which was closed on the [illegible] beds in the day time, so as to give the lodgers a chance to do business. For [illegible] they [illegible] brought their [illegible] Governor Kieft did not approve of [illegible] travel. He passed a law forbidding any family to sell a stranger [illegible] than one meal or give him more than one night's lodging without first giving notice.

Broad street between Beaver and Whitehall was the first paved street. It was [illegible] in 1656, with a gutter in the center and no sidewalk. Hendrick Kip lived on Stone street. He found the Kip family, Abram Van Vranken was his nearest neighbor, Verplanck laid the foundation of the Verplanck family. He [illegible] to farm in the [illegible] of Fulton [illegible].

Andries Hudde was the first city surveyor. He received $30 a year. The first recorded sale of a New York city lot was one on Bridge st., 30 feet front by 110 deep. It went off cheap—for $1 60. That was in 1642. Anthony street was named after Allard Anthony, the first commercial dry goods merchant in New York. He had a store on Broadway, below the site of Trinity church, and did a wholesale and retail trade. He was rich, influential, [illegible] and popular. He had a shop and was ready for any style of bargain. He sold once a sheet as to Dan Van Clief for as much beaver that as he [illegible] the [illegible] Anthony's two daughters are the first mentioned as [illegible] and fashionable ladies in this city.

Anthony kicked when the first market was established on what is now Bowling Green, but it was in front of his door and his wife and daughters did not like the racket made by the marketing men.

There was too much cow lobbying and calf bleating to suit their refined ears. But the majority of the burghers overruled Anthony, and the market went on.

William Beekman the ancestor of the Beekman family, gave his name to our William and Beekman streets. He came from Holland with Peter Stuyvesant. Beekman street was then a swamp called Crigier Bush. William's [illegible] and day on a hill at the side of it.

The Beekman mansion, built on the Beekman farm in 1762, stood until 1874 on the corner of Fifty-first street and First avenue. The De Peysters in 1800, built in 1765, was opposite Pine street. The balcony was for three quarters of a century the favorite resort of the governors of New York when they wished to hold military reviews. The De Peysters then put nearly $10,000 worth of silverware on the table every day and kept sixteen [illegible] hold servants.

Capt. Kidd lived in a comfortable and pleasant home on Liberty street. His wife was beautiful, accomplished and [illegible] of the highest sociability. They had one charming little daughter. New York's first poet received in [illegible]. His name was James Nelson. He wrote "The Complaint of New Amsterdam to Her Mother." What the complaint was has not been [illegible] clear. Cortlandt street is after Jacobus Van Cortlandt, mayor of New York in 1710. Hunter street is named from Governor Robert Hunter, appointed by Queen Anne in 1707, when Alexander Hamilton was under secretary of state.

Anne Street [illegible] but any [illegible] in New York society was obliged to go to English Dutch and French. The French element [illegible]
